

Picuris Pueblo Archaeological Field School

Program Information

Program Name	Picuris Pueblo Archaeological Field School
General Description / Special Programs	Join us this summer for The Picuris Pueblo Archaeological Field School! Students will earn 6 hours of undergraduate or graduate credit over the course of 4-weeks through hands-on training in archaeological fieldwork in the beautiful Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northern New Mexico. Student participants will collaborate with archaeologists and tribal members at Picuris Pueblo, to gain experience in archaeological field survey, excavation, and collections management. In addition to ceramic and lithic identification, participants will also gain training in technical skills like GIS and geo-chemical analysis. In addition to daily fieldwork, participants partake in site visits, lectures, and tribal events to further their understanding of the ongoing indigenous history of New Mexico.
