

Conference on Asian Linguistic Anthropology

Program Information

Program Name	Conference on Asian Linguistic Anthropology
General Description / Special Programs	The CALA, The Annual Conference on Asian Linguistic Anthropology, is an annual Conference and Society on Linguistic Anthropology with a focus on Asian countries, and regions. Scholars globally gather to engage in work on fields of Asian Linguistic Anthropology, though this does not limit interest to those working on Asia, nor to Linguistic Anthropologists, Linguistics, or Anthropologists. Networking multiple universities, the Conference venue shifts annually, where the Conference main committee, advised by the Conference scientific committee, collaborates with the respective universities.

Misc Information	The Conference on Asian Linguistic Anthropology symbolizes a significant movement forward for Linguistic Anthropology, to further problematize current perspectives and praxis in the field. The CALA responds to concerns by those within Linguistics, Anthropology, Sociolinguistics, Sociology, Cultural studies, and Linguistic Anthropology, pertinent to Asia. The Association reduces the gap between focus on Asian regions and work by Asian academics, largely contributable to issues of funding and expertise. The CALA thus aims to increasingly opportune academics to exchange knowledge, expertise, and valuable Linguistic and Anthropological data across the world, through the interpersonal and inter-institutional networks the CALA conferences seek to build. To ground these efforts, The Conference networks a large and growing number of institutions globally, to support this much needed project.
