| Program Name                           | Monmouth University, Department of History and Anthropology   |
| General Description / Special Programs | The Anthropology curriculum is designed to provide a strong grounding in three of the four sub-fields of Anthropology: Cultural Anthropology, Archaeology, and Biological Anthropology, within the context of a broad liberal arts education. The goal of the Anthropology program is to provide students with a deep understanding of humanity that will be relevant to their professions, their daily lives. The program combines a strong theoretical grounding, with an emphasis on practical skills and prepares students for careers as well as for further study. Special programs include extensive internship and fieldwork opportunities. |
