<td>General Description / Special Programs</td>
<td>Founded in 1902, the American Anthropological Association (AAA) is the world's largest organization of professional anthropologists. The AAA is governed by a 17-member Executive Board, elected by the membership. Members belong to one or more of 40 Sections. The leaders of these sections form a Section Assembly, which provides advice to the Executive Board on matters of policy, communications, and Association operations.</td>

AAA has a number of resources related to the history of the Association located on-site, such as our institutional library, photograph collection of past AAA presidents, and a list of executive board motions.

AAA maintains an institutional library which includes the association's publications throughout AAA's long lifespan. It includes journals and newsletters published by AAA sections, previous and current AnthroGuides, books published by the association, and more. In addition, AAA has a considerable repository of materials related to the governance of the Association that take up more than 50 meters of shelf space at the Smithsonian's National Anthropology Archives.

Internships Available

Each summer, the American Anthropological Association offers two internship opportunities funded by member donations. Internships are six weeks in length and usually extend from early July through mid-August. Internships are unpaid, however they are provided housing and a meal/travel stipend.

Internship Info

Interns will spend approximately 40 percent of their time working onsite at the AAA offices in Arlington, VA, and the other 60 percent of their time working on-site at one of two locations: The Naval Historic & Heritage Command and The Smithsonian Center for Folklife and Cultural Heritage.

Learn about the incredible students who have been AAA interns in the past in our AAA Summer Internship Hall of Fame.

Internship Required

Annual Meeting Abstracts; the AnthroGuide; Anthropology News; Ethnographic Praxis in Industry Conference Proceedings; and AnthroSource, the publishing portfolio containing 21 titles, including American Anthropologist (the flagship journal of the American Anthropological Association) American Ethnologist; Annals of Anthropological Practice; Anthropology & Education Quarterly; Anthropology and Humanism; Anthropology of Consciousness; Anthropology of Work Review; Archaeological Papers of the AAA; City and Society; Cultural Anthropology; Culture, Agriculture, Food & Environment; Ethos; General Anthropology Bulletin; The Journal of Latin American and Caribbean Anthropology; Journal of Linguistic Anthropology; Medical Anthropology Quarterly; Museum Anthropology; North American Dialogue; PoLAR: Political and Legal Anthropology Review; Student Anthropologist; Teaching Anthropology; Transforming Anthropology; Visual Anthropology Review; and Voices.

Minority Dissertation Fellowship: This fellowship is meant to encourage ethnic minorities of the U.S. to complete doctoral degrees in anthropology, thereby increasing diversity in the discipline and/or promoting research on issues of concern among minority populations. The $10,000 award is granted once a year to a minority student to support the writing phase of their dissertation. For more details and how to apply, please see: https://www.americananthro.org/prizes-and-awards.
The American Anthropological Association provides extensive online resources to promote scholarly exchange, teaching and learning, career advancement and information about the field for anthropologists, teachers, and students. Our website, www.americananthro.org, is home to the ACE Anthropology Careers & Employment, a go-to place for both employers and job seekers. We also feature AAA members in the news, policy and advocacy statements, public education initiatives on race and migration, as well as access to a variety of social media channels for member engagement. The AAA Statement on Ethics: Principles of Professional Responsibility can be found on our website, along with the complete history of how the AAA’s commitment to ethics and professional responsibility has been articulated over the past century.
