

Program Information

Program Name	University of Windsor
General Description / Special Programs	Anthropology can be taken as a minor (6 courses) at the University of Windsor. In this interdisciplinary Department (Sociology, Anthropology and Criminology), anthropologists compose a significant and dynamic cluster interested in migration, ethnography, economic anthropology, gender, urban life, multiculturalism, politics, social justice and movements and the environment. Our research areas encompass North America, Europe, South Asia and Latin America. In addition, we have expertise in forensic anthropology and archaeology. The Anthropology program is housed within the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminology, thus students benefit from both specialized and cross-disciplinary learning. Students can pursue an anthropology minor.
