

Wisconsin Lutheran College, Department of Anthropology

Program Information

Program Name	Wisconsin Lutheran College, Department of Anthropology
General Description / Special Programs	Study and research opportunities in the department of anthropology and sociology at Wisconsin Lutheran College include: primate behavioral studies, historic and prehistoric archaeology, and forensic anthropology. The curriculum presented to Wisconsin Lutheran College students follows the guidelines established by the American Anthropological Association (AAA). Lecture topics, laboratory exercises, and student research are structured in such a way as to conform to the Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws of AAA (1983) and the guidelines established by the constitution of the World Council of Anthropological Associations (WCAA, 2010), the Register of Professional Archaeology (RPA), and the Wisconsin Archaeological Survey (WAS). Additionally, all research conducted as part of the study of anthropology at WLC follows the procedural guidelines of the National Science Board (NSB).
